Understood - a reasonable response by your office.

However, will you identify the officer you speak of. While he may not have involvement in criminal cases / investigations - he is still a LEO - and apparently his "non-involvement" status is linked to his credibility status (lack of).

Identifying this officer indicates transparency within your office, AND sends a clear message to others, of your zero tolerance of misconduct within law enforcement.

We have one officer in our jurisdiction that would fit your description and he is not involved any longer in criminal investigations or in criminal cases. We have no other current officers that fit your description with any of the agencies in this jurisdiction.
